TELEGRAPHIC.

SAVANNAH, (Ga.), Sept. 10.—Bolling Whitefield of Brunswick, attorney for the Spanish government, and the Spanish Consul at this port, were in conference today relative to taking steps in the United States courts here against the tag Dauntless, in the event of her release at Brunswick. Whitefield asserts that Spain will make a general claim for the vessel and her cargo, and that the collectors of customs in this and other Georgia ports have been directed from Washington to be extra vigilant against filibustering expeditions.

HAVANA, Sept. 10.—The report that Capt. General Weyler had issued orders that all mails should be opened is not true.

Within the last fortnight twelve insurgent incendiaries have been shot, and the Spanish government is now endeavoring to meet the same fate.

At Salinas on September 3, the insurgent Mendez was executed, and at Port Republic, Angel Nunez Torre and Alfredo Alcala, also insurgents, were put to death in the same way.

Alfonso Tolon, a son of Samuel T. Tolon, the American merchant at Camaguey, proprietor of the famous restaurant here, was assassinated today by his clerk, Carlos Bachigalupo, who is insane.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 12.—Mr. Bryan arrived in Kansas City at 6:30 this morning. He was met by a large number of nearly a thousand workmen from the car shops and packing houses who demanded a speech. From the rear end of the platform he addressed them as follows: "Follow citizens: I am very glad to be able to speak to you even for a moment. Some of our opponents tell us to open the mills instead of the mines. That reminds me of a man who said his horse would go all right if he could just get the wagon started." (Laughter and applause.) "It is not time to start before the horse. What use is there for mills unless they produce what the mills produce, and how can you start them as long as those who produce wealth in this country, particularly the farmers, are not able to get enough out of what they raise to pay taxes and interest?"

LANSING, Mich., Sept. 7.—Monday night Mr. Fitch said he had advocated free coinage for years, that he proposed to remain both a republican and a bi-metalist, and that he refused to permit the proportions of his republicanism and his bi-metalism to be ordered by democratic authority or by measure with a Bryan type line. All parties favored free coinage and differed only as to the best method of accomplishing it. John Stuart Mill completed the argument in favor of bi-metalism into a sentence which he said that an increase in the quantity of money raises prices. The market value of the products of labor had been affected though not absolutely controlled by the action in 1873 of Europe and the United States in abolishing the free coinage of silver. No man could feel more bitterly than he toward those who engineered the demonization of silver, but two foolish men made a mistake, and he could not now repair the mistake of 1873 by flying to the opposite extreme and pulling down the single gold standard merely to erect a single silver standard in its place.

In 1873 all the great commercial nations except England were bi-metallic. Since then they had seated gold as a lonely despot on the throne of finance and
